

Employee Safety: Everyone's Responsibility

Most likely, you have been trained since childhood to avoid getting hurt. No one wants to suffer an injury – especially one that requires medical treatment. Let's take a few minutes to review your responsibilities in the safety process.

Come to work ready to work.

Statistics tell us that most injuries are caused by unsafe behaviors, and often fatigue and inattention are contributing factors in those behaviors. Take care of yourself and get the rest you need to be focused and attentive to your responsibilities. You are part of a team that depends on each other, and that team is important to everyone's success. Take your responsibilities seriously.

Follow safety policies and procedures.

They are there for your safety and required by law. Remember to:

- Practice safe lifting procedures. Use equipment provided when necessary.
- Wear your personal protective equipment correctly and consistently.
- Know the chemicals in your work area and how to use them safely.
- Watch out for forklifts and other material handling equipment; a forklift can't stop quickly, and if you step in the path of one or in the way of other material handling equipment, the consequences could be deadly.

Report hazards to your supervisor and/or safety committee when you identify them.

- Look for things that might hurt someone (you, a co-worker, a visitor, or anyone else on the premises).
- Make your work area as "injury proof" as possible.
- Develop solutions – be a team player and become an important part of finding solutions!

Being a team player means you follow the rules, encourage others to follow the rules, and are willing to ask for help when you need it. It also means you are willing to help others when they need you. Remember that team work makes every job easier and we all share responsibility for each other's safety.

Get involved in your safety program!
YOU can make a difference!

Incident Reporting: I Think I'm Hurt - Now What?

No one wants you to get hurt!

Everyone needs to work together and make every effort to minimize on-the-job injuries. If an injury does occur, however, it is important that you follow appropriate procedures to get timely medical care. Listed below are the steps you must follow if you have been hurt on the job and believe your injury may be covered by workers compensation:

Report all incidents IMMEDIATELY to your supervisor.

This includes "near-misses" that may not require immediate medical treatment. Reporting incidents helps us take corrective action to reduce the likelihood of other employees or residents being hurt. It also documents the event, so if you need medical treatment later, your supervisor knows what happened. Be sure any safety-related incident that occurs is reported before the end of your shift, even if you do not believe you need immediate medical treatment.

Know which medical facility is on your panel of physicians.

Like most group insurance plans, there are specific approved physicians that you must see if you are injured on the job. Be sure to notify your supervisor before getting medical treatment. Failure to get approval may jeopardize or delay payment of your medical bills.

Participate in the accident investigation process.

No one knows better than you what just happened. Communicate frankly with your supervisor as he or she investigates the incident and documents what occurred. Your supervisor is trying to determine what happened, so future occurrences can be prevented.

Plan to return to work in some capacity.

You are an important part of the team, and we need you. Every effort will be made to find transitional duty that complies with any medical restrictions your doctor may deem appropriate. Plan to return to work after your medical appointment – we'll do our best to find work you are medically able to perform. Returning to work is good for everyone, and minimizes any financial impact that lost workdays may have on your budget. Remember that workers compensation benefits, set by state law, do not fully compensate you for being out of work.

Communicate, communicate, communicate!

Anytime you are out of work for a work-related injury, it is critical that you stay in touch with your supervisor, human resources professional, and claims professional. Communication helps everyone be better informed about your condition and can speed up payments of any benefits to which you may be entitled. Remember to contact us after every medical appointment, and bring in a signed doctor's note that documents your work status, as well as any future scheduled appointments.

You are an integral part of our team.

You have important responsibilities, and many people depend on you. Report any unsafe conditions or behaviors to your supervisor, safety committee member, or management team member so appropriate action can be taken. If you are hurt, following these rules will eliminate some of the stress involved in the injury process.

As an employee, you have the right to report work-related injuries without fear of retaliation by your employer.

SafetyConnection: Employee Safety: Everyone's Responsibility

This document provides general information and suggestions related to workplace safety programs only. State requirements and individual workplace conditions and circumstances vary, and the information contained herein cannot replace or substitute for the services of trained professionals. Although the information contained herein was obtained from sources believed to be reliable, Key Risk makes no warranty and assumes no liability or responsibility for the correctness, sufficiency, or completeness of this information or any damages incurred resulting from the use of this information.

Key Risk is a member company of W. R. Berkley Corporation. Products and services are provided by one or more insurance company subsidiaries of W. R. Berkley Corporation. Not all products and services are available in every jurisdiction, and the precise coverage afforded by any insurer is subject to the actual terms and conditions of the policies as issued.

For more information please contact your Risk Management Specialist or email us at riskmanagement@keyrisk.com.

www.KeyRisk.com